CHANGING PEASANT CULTURE IN POLAND

JÓZEF OBRĘBSKI, Ph.D. (Lond).

Dr. Obrębski studied social anthropology at the University of Cracow and later in London at the London School of Economics and Political Science where he was a pupil of the late Professor Malinowski. He has done fieldwork in the Balkans and Eastern Poland. As a member of the Polish Sociological Institute and the Polish Institute for Peasant Culture he was engaged in research on social change and cultural advancement among Polish peasantry. In this paper, Dr. Obrębski will discuss the effects of education on peasant life and some methodological implications involved in the study of a changing peasant community.
